

Article VIII.C.1. Adult and Community Education General Responsibilities

A. Adult and Community Education

Adult and community education provides continuing educational opportunities for residents of the District. In addition to the high school completion program, there are classes in adult basic education, homemaking for the disadvantaged, early childhood education, vocational education and numerous special interest classes, including senior citizen programs. A variety of community education classes are available for all age groups and segments of the community.

Fees supplement categorical funds in order for these programs to be self-supporting. Cooperation with day schools, with community agencies and other groups provides various services at a minimal cost.

B. Mill Hollow

Mill Hollow provides an instructional program for students to study plants, animals, geology, ecology, and the environment in a natural setting.
